29 July 2018

Dear Colleagues,

It is with great pleasure that I am writing to welcome you to the Summer Institute on Curriculum Development for the Interdisciplinary Study of Antisemitism, to be held at St. John's College, Oxford, beginning Sunday, 29 July.

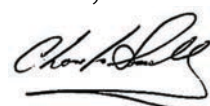

I am certain given your qualifications, experience and commitment to understanding and combating antisemitism, and to scholarship itself, that you will add much to the program. The success of the workshop is dependent on the contributions you and our colleagues will bring to the seminar room.

I am optimistic that the Summer Institute will continue to make inroads into creating a "space" within the university for the study of contemporary antisemitism as a new academic discipline. In effect, we are beginning to break a taboo – break the silence.

Through our groundbreaking program, we are developing a formal and informal network of scholars committed to this goal. We hope that more professors will teach courses in contemporary antisemitism studies and will join our efforts. Your involvement and assistance is very welcome. In fact, we hope you will become an Ambassador for these efforts.

See you in Oxford!

Yours,

Charles Asher Small
ISGAP-Oxford Summer Institute Convener

Dr. Phyllis Ferguson

Since 2010, Phyllis Ferguson has been a member of Oxford Transitional Justice Research Group in University of Oxford and its Hironde Project, while writing on post-conflict in Timor and on Oxford's Timorese community. Her present research is on "Transnationalism: The generation left behind, the generations here: loneliness and longing – becoming Timorese there and being East Timorese in Oxford"; it is part of a book in progress. She co-authored a report on Contestations around FGM: Activism and the Academy, an IGS e-book, 2016. She was an organizer for the 5th S.E. Asian Studies Symposium - Human and Environmental Welfare in Southeast Asia, and of its Festival of SE Asia in Oxford, including an exhibition on S.E. Asian Vernacular Architecture, in 2016.

Dr. Ferguson was a member of the History and Social Studies faculties, of Congregation and of St Antony's College, Oxford, where she coordinated African Studies Programs from 1987-1998. For the next five years she worked at the Socio-Legal Studies Centre with the International Human Rights Law Group, organizing seminars on the Pinochet Case and international conferences on the death penalty in the US, on the situation of prisoners held at Guantanamo Bay, and Hugo Chavez's visit to Oxford in 2002.

In 2003, Dr. Ferguson began working in Timor-Leste, first at the Reception, Truth and Reconciliation Commission, CAVR, researching and writing Chega! - the 5 volume report of the 24-year Indonesian Occupation 1975-1999. She then worked for the UN on Peacebuilding and Human Rights initiatives for women and children and on non-violent Education and Training with INGOs and NGOs. In the crisis of 2006, she worked to provide support for women and children in the complex emergency of 170,000 displaced in IDP camps. At UNDP and UNWomen, she continued research to monitor the emerging role of Timorese women in national and local politics, including work on the legislation against domestic violence.

Professor David Hirsh

hirshd@gmail.com

David Hirsh has been in the Sociology department at Goldsmiths College since 2003. He studied Sociology as an undergraduate at City University, London. He did an MA in Philosophy and Social Theory at Warwick University and wrote his PhD there on crimes against humanity and international law.

He was the holder of the Sociological Review Fellowship in 2001-2002, which enabled him to write Law against Genocide: cosmopolitan trials, published in 2003. This book was awarded the British Sociological Association Philip Abrams Prize for the best first book in sociology in 2004. By focusing on two trials from the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, the trial of Andrei Sawoniuk for crimes committed during the Holocaust, and the David Irving libel case, the book comes to some tentative conclusions about the possibility of the emergence of cosmopolitan law.

Professor Hirsh received a Rothschild/Hanadiv Foundation research grant of £25000 for a project “to investigate the character and dynamics of anti-Zionism as a contemporary political movement and its relationship to antisemitism” (January 2007 to August 2007). The central research output made possible by this funding was a major Working Paper published by the Yale Initiative for the Interdisciplinary Study of Antisemitism, entitled Anti-Zionism and Antisemitism: Cosmopolitan Reflections. In 2006-2007, Professor Hirsh was a Research Fellow at Yale University. His upcoming book, Contemporary Left Antisemitism, will be published in September 2017.

Nikita Malik

nikita.malik@henryjacksonsociety.org

Nikita is the Director of the Centre on Radicalisation and Terrorism (CRT) at the Henry Jackson Society.

She is an internationally recognised expert on countering violent extremism, terrorism, and hate-based violence, with a focus on youth deradicalisation. In her role, she has worked with key policy makers and government departments in the UK and globally.

A key component of Nikita's work focuses on the propagation of extremist material online, including on social media platforms and the Darknet. Her research has put forward a number of solutions to foster engagement between UK government policymakers and technology companies.

Her past research reports have been regularly featured in the media, and her findings and policy recommendations have been discussed in the House of Commons, House of Lords, European Parliament, the US State Department, and the United Nations.

In addition to working with government policy makers and the media, Nikita has also engaged NGOs to build partnerships and deliver high impact programs on youth and radicalisation, including Save the Children, Child Soldiers, Child to Child, UNICEF, and others. Her work on radicalisation has paralleled models on how children are exploited by gangs, cults, and violent groups, and the way technology can help or hinder their exit.

Her work to date has led Forbes Magazine honouring her in 2018 as a 30 Under 30, and a key influencer in law and policy. Nikita was educated at the University of Oxford (where she completed her MA and MSc) and has a second MSc in Middle Eastern Politics and Arabic from SOAS, University of London. She is fluent in four languages.

Luca Lindner

Luca.Lindner@mccann.com

Luca Lindner is the President of McCann Worldgroup, Americas, becoming the first executive in the company's history to head both North America and Latin America, which together represent McCann Worldgroup's largest region in terms of both geography and revenue.

The appointment recognized Mr. Lindner's ability to navigate the complex needs of large multinational clients, as well as the increasing mobility of opportunities and talent across the Americas. Mr. Lindner began with McCann as Regional Director for McCann Latin America/Caribbean and in 2011 added oversight of the Middle East and Africa to his responsibilities. In this multi-regional role, he drove remarkable innovation and growth on behalf of the agency's roster of blue-chip clients, and under his leadership, the creative and professional reputation of McCann throughout Latin America had flourished, as had business results. Regarded as one of the industry's leading globalists, he has initiated multinational research projects that have increased McCann's knowledge about brands and consumers. When he was heading Latin America, he created The Truth About Street Study, a proprietary research approach that includes one-on-one contact between agency employees and the reality on the streets. Launched in 2012, it is now in its third major iteration. More recently, he oversaw the company's Truth About Global Brands Study involving 30,000 interviews in 29 countries around the world, in order to uncover the new dynamics affecting global and local brands in today's consumer environment.

Albert van Wijngaarden

albertvanw@gmail.com

After graduating in European History last year, Albert van Wijngaarden left for India to conduct research on parliamentary democracy for a project based at Oxford University. After a month in Delhi, he started teaching at the university level. He thoroughly enjoyed lecturing in unfamiliar surroundings and has decided to repeat this “visiting fellowship scheme” for the next couple of years. The coming term, he will head to Russia to teach history at Novosibirsk State University, followed either by a return to India or a semester in Almaty, Kazakhstan. Over the course of five years, he studied at seven different universities around Western Europe, ending up with degrees in history and philosophy, and gaining experience in many of the fields within the humanities and social sciences. He was very interested in Holocaust Studies and travelled to Israel to write a thesis on Holocaust memorial cultures. At the ISGAP-Oxford Summer Institute, he hopes to combine this history with stories of present day antisemitism and exclusion. His aim is to create a course that he can teach around the world in countries that will be less familiar with antisemitism and its history, but where students can benefit enormously from “the Jewish story.” He hopes that such a course will teach students how to better deal with exclusion and discrimination within their own societies.
