History Seminar: Minding Historical Gaps

Dr. John P. Williams

“If you want to walk fast, walk alone. If you want to walk far, go with others.”

(African Proverb)

Seminar Rationale:

The study of introductory-level United States history in American colleges and universities is divided traditionally into two survey courses with “U.S. History I” covering the Pre-Columbian Era through the Civil War and “U.S. History II” covering the Reconstruction period to the present day. Combined, the two surveys encompass over 3,000 years. One of the most important aspects of this organizational structure is an emphasis upon overlapping themes, concepts, and paradigms running through both courses. This approach not only has breadth and depth, but also highlights and explains the historical context underlying many relevant topics of importance to Americans today.

However, a prime inadequacy within the current design of most survey courses is the omission of the theme of antisemitism. Proper attention given to the study of historical antisemitism and its impact on current social, economic, and political problems in the United States, and indeed the world, would illuminate the endemic contemporary social problems of racism, sexism, Islamophobia, and xenophobia. By examining both historical and present-day antisemitism, professors teaching American history survey courses could fill in these important historical gaps of knowledge to provide a more complete understanding of United States history that would also be directly relevant to important modern social issues.

Major gaps regarding historical antisemitism currently exist in the teaching of United States history. A survey with five questions related to the teaching of these two subjects in conjunction with one another was given to over 50 university and community college professors. The results of this survey are alarming: Even though there were at least 10 specific historical events (see appendix A) that should be covered in U.S. History I and in conjunction with U.S. History II that directly contribute to the rise of the Nazi agenda and the Holocaust, instructors according to the survey did not teach them at all since they deemed these topics not relevant or received little or no attention (see Appendix B). In other words, students will cover 20 chapters in their American history class before being presented with material related to antisemitism and its correlation to racism. To ignore this hateful, racist aspect of United States history for so long is a moral oversight in the design of the current curriculum. We would be leveraging our introductory survey history classes to help our students better understand and appreciate answers to such questions as, why do people hate? Is hate historically conditioned? What allows hate to become universally accepted? What happens when people ignore the proliferation of hate towards a minority group to the point that it becomes accepted by mainstream political thinkers?

Seminar Overview:

Recent events in the United States and throughout the world have brought to the forefront issues related to antisemitism, Islamophobia, racism, sexism, and xenophobia. For example, antisemitism and racism in the United States and in Europe is up over 70% in the last three years, and the rise of Islamophobia in parts of Russia, China, and Africa is also rising as well.
However catastrophic, deadly, and destructive these issues and events have become, they can serve as “teachable moments,” calling for instructors to use the humanities, namely history, to help their students better understand current events and their outcomes in both an objective and subjective manner.

This seminar project “MINDING HISTORICAL GAPS” has been created in response to this crisis: to help instructors use historical facts to enable students to better understand and interpret current events. To aid in this effort, this seminar draws upon the study of historical antisemitism and its associated tropes, motifs, and diatribes to relate them to key events, political and social ideologies, and movements, as they relate to American history. Through the study of antisemitism, instructors will illustrate the themes of racism, xenophobia, and sexism in human history.

It is important to note that antisemitism is considered by many historians and scholars to be not only unique (it is enduring, it is intense, and it is universal), but it also serves as a template for the “original hate” -- an ideology of intolerance that was, and still is, directed at one group for its distinct origins, beliefs, mores, and values. These very same attributes make Jews and antisemitism the perfect study for a better understanding of racism, xenophobia, and Islamophobia and all its tropes, diatribes, and motifs.

This seminar will examine the phenomenon of antisemitism through its various stages of historical development with an emphasis on two primary themes: (1) the intellectual, religious, political, and social roots of Jew-hatred, and (2) the impact of antisemitism on Jewish life and culture in Europe and later in America. This survey of antisemitism and its impact will begin with the ancient period (Egypt), continue to the late nineteenth century, and will conclude with the roots of modern genocide, the Holocaust, and contemporary antisemitism. Topics include pagan responses to Jews, Christian theological antisemitism, the first Crusade, the ritual murder accusation, the blood libel, the Inquisition, the impact of the Reformation, Russian pogroms, antisemitism in America, the Holocaust, Holocaust denial, and Arabic antisemitism.

Seminar Learning Objectives:

1. To better understand and appreciate how historical antisemitism interacts with past and contemporary events in the United States and in Europe;
2. To appreciate the effect Jewish history has on American and European history, and the role (unwillingly foisted upon them) of victim, whose persecution has helped define modern racism, antisemitism, stereotypes, biases, and ethnic discrimination;
3. To understand the connections between antisemitism in Europe and Middle Eastern histories and relate them to United States history;
4. To consider the presence and effects of antisemitism in educational institutions;
5. To cultivate a critical understanding of antisemitism as reflected through film, television, and song;
6. To promote systematic observations, discussion and reflection among attendees concerning prejudice and antisemitism in their teaching of US History I and II.

Seminar Requirements:

- Attendees are required to attend all seminar sessions, and to complete all reading assignments online or in print.
- Attendees are to demonstrate a command of assigned readings, the ability to engage in meaningful discussion with other students and the professor, and present an oral presentation based on topics related to antisemitism in an assigned contemporary setting.

- Attendees are expected to respect and appreciate the breadth and depth of this seminar and use the reading, discussions, and final project to enhance their own teachings of American history and topics related to antisemitism.
- Attendees are required to submit an end-of-course summary essay that encompasses major themes, concepts, and arguments covered in each of the five sessions. This essay will be at least 6,000 words in length using proper citations (Chicago Style). It is due 14 days following the conclusion of this seminar to the Division Office.

Seminar Materials:

- Each seminar attendee will receive a printed copy of all articles and a copy of all books used for this seminar.
- All films discussed in this seminar are located in the Collin College library and can also be accessed through the online portal for streaming.
- All attendees will be given Collin College service hours credit for attending this seminar.

Seminar Attendees:

The seminar selection committee will select from a pool of candidates 6 full-time faculty, 6 adjunct faculty and 3 emerging young scholars from the Collin College student body. The seminar is free to all seminar attendees. All materials for this seminar are provided and college service hours applied.
Course Schedule:

This seminar is broken into (5) two-hour sessions. Each session will consist of three parts: lecture, film, and discussion. Should any attendee have to miss a session, they are to notify the Collin College division office as soon as possible so that materials covered can be disseminated. All sessions will be recorded.

Session One:

Topics related to this first session include the following:

- What is Jew hatred? What are its origins?
- What is antisemitism? What are its main elements and features?
- What is a diaspora? Which groups historically lay claim to diaspora status?
- What makes antisemitism unique and worthy of study as a lens to view and examine other forms of hatred?
- What past events from antiquity to the present help us better understand antisemitism and its relationship to current events?
- What pall did the destruction of the first and second Temple cast on Jews?

Readings:

“The Rumour About the Jews,” Francesca Trivellato, Aeon, https://aeon.co/essays/what-is-the-link-between-medieval-and-modern-antisemitism

Film:

- “Hatred of Jews is Unique, Says Dennis Prager” at Proclaim 18

- Corey Gil-Shuster, “Israelis: Is being Jewish a religion, a nationality or both?”

  https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Yul533vTqQk

DQs:

- In your own educational experience, were you taught the origins of Jew hatred or antisemitism? If so, what was the timing and context of its teaching?
- Why does the discussion of antisemitism not come up more in American history survey courses given its longevity and impact throughout human history?
- Why do American students consistently demonstrate historical gaps in their learning regarding history and some of the tropes, motifs, and diatribes already discussed?
- How has your personal experience with learning about antisemitism impacted your teaching and world view?

Session Two:

Topics related to this second session include the following:

- What is a trope? Diatribe? Motif? What is their relationship to propaganda? Racism?
- How is each used to maintain or attack the status quo?
- What are some examples that have been used to facilitate antisemitism?
- What role did the Christian church play in the perpetuation of antisemitism?
What does Shakespeare and Chaucer have to do with it?
When did antisemitism go secular? What does science have to do with it?

Readings:

- Frank, Steve. “’The Merchant of Venice’ perpetuates vile stereotypes of Jews. So why do we still produce it? Let us give this Shakespeare play a rest from the stage.” Washington Post, July 28, 2016.
- “The Jews and Their Lies.” Martin Luther (1543) Translated by Martin H. Bertram
- Anti-Semitism in Chaucer’s “Prioress’s Tale” by Emmy Stark Zitter

Film:

- David Lawrence Young, “The Jew in English Literature,” https://www.youtube.com/watch?time_continue=1&v=w-iPCKu5YHw&feature=emb_logo
- “Coursework: Anti-Semitism in Germany 1819-1945- Violence, Media, and Literature,” https://www.youtube.com/watch?time_continue=16&v=_GK_5gXCQ10&feature=emb_logo

DQs:

- Think back to your own education. At what point, if ever, was antisemitism brought up in connection with Shakespeare’s or Chaucer’s work?
● How much have you heard, prior to reading the assigned selection, about Martin Luther’s opinion on Jews? Why do you think this has been your experience? How would you compare your experience to the average college student?
● What other examples in literature can you think of that bring out antisemitism, xenophobia, racism, and sexism?

Session Three:

Topics related to this third session include the following:

● What are the origins of antisemitism in America? What makes it different from European antisemitism?
● Why is antisemitism tolerated?
● Who is Leo Frank?
● What are the origins of antisemitism on college campuses?
● What was the American response to the Holocaust?
● What is the significance of 1948 as a response to the Holocaust and modern Jewish history as well as American history?

Readings:

● Tibi, B (2017) Antisemitism Before and After the Holocaust.
● Lang, B, Race and Racism in Theory and Practice.
● Wyman, David (1985) Abandonment of the Jews: America and the Holocaust (1941-1945).
Film:

- “The Holocaust was a Hoax,” http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3x2UMh9Hr0

DQ:

- What did you think the first time you heard someone refer to the belief that the Holocaust was a hoax? Did other conspiracy theories regarding other historical events being a hoax resonate with you? How did you handle correcting the historical record?
- What is the relationship between Holocaust denial and other forms of historical denials in American history?
- How does this relate to the Black Lives Matter movement? What connections, if any, can you make between Holocaust deniers and Racism deniers? Why?

Session Four:

Topics related to this fourth session include the following:

- What are the origins of Blacks and Jews relation with regards to Civil Rights?
- What is the BLM movement?
- What is the #metoo movement?
- How does the current immigrant crisis draw parallels to historical antisemitism?

Readings:

Film:

• Khan, Saffiyah. “Be active, not an activist,” TEDTalk, http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=lpAwk7b4Uqc

DQs:

• In what ways could instructors channel the positive energy of the BLM, #metoo movement, and other civil engagements by young people constructively on campus?

• How much is too much? How much is too little?

• Using the historical record, what events in American history serve as an example to be studied? Discussed? Ignored?
Session Five:

Topics and discussion questions related to this fifth session include the following:

- Is anti-Zionism merely a modern expression of antisemitism?
- Is anti-Zionism in Europe different than in the Arab World?
- Is America Israel’s keeper?
- Is there a resurgence of antisemitism in America?
- What do the Hamas, Hezbollah, ISIS, and the Muslim Brotherhood have to do with a resurgence of antisemitism in America? How might someone infer that Islamophobia is the new antisemitism?
- What is the BDS movement and how does it stifle academic free speech on campus?
- What is the difference between religious Islam and political Islam?

Readings:

• Institute, The Atlantic’s Leon Wieseltier and The Islamic Monthly’s Arsalan Iftikhar
  https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Ypsuk510FMc

DQs:

• In what ways can we constructively use the Internet to combat many of the ISMs talked about in this section of the seminar?

• From either U.S. History I or II, in what ways has American foreign policy contributed to these ISMs talked about in this section of the seminar?

• How might an American history instructor leave the textbook constructively and use World History to engage the topics of this section of the seminar?
