WELCOME PACKET

1st to 5th August, 2021

Pembroke College, Oxford
and the ISGAP Digital Research Centre
20 July 2021

Dear Colleagues,

On behalf of the ISGAP Team, it is with great pleasure that I am writing to welcome you to the ISGAP-Oxford Summer Institute for Curriculum Development in Critical Antisemitism Studies, to be held at Pembroke College, Oxford, and over the ISGAP Digital Research Centre, beginning Sunday, 1 August, to Thursday, 5 August, 2021.

I am certain given your qualifications, experience and commitment to understanding and combating antisemitism and all forms of hate, and to scholarship itself, that you will add much to the program. The success of the Summer Institute is dependent on the contributions you and our colleagues will bring to this timely gathering.

I am optimistic that the ISGAP-Oxford Summer Institute will continue to make inroads into creating a “space” within academia for the study of critical contemporary antisemitism as a new academic discipline. In effect, we are beginning to break a taboo and the silence.

Through our groundbreaking program, we are developing a formal and informal network of scholars committed to this goal. We are committed to ensuring that more professors teach courses in contemporary critical antisemitism studies, and that students will engage this subject matter, and join our efforts.

Given these tumultuous times and the explosion of antisemitism these last few months, leading to a rise of antisemitism globally, racism, and other forms of prejudice, our work and meeting is all the more vital.

Your engagement and efforts are welcome. In fact, we hope you will become ambassadors for these vital and timely efforts.

Looking forward to seeing you online and in Oxford.

Sincerely,

With much appreciation and warmest regards,

Charles Asher Small, Executive Director, ISGAP

“The Uniqueness of Antisemitism: How Do We Explain Its Widespread Appeal?”
Antisemitism is not only the longest recorded form of hatred and prejudice; it is also the most widespread across different societies. Over the twenty centuries of its existence, antisemitic argumentation has become additive and so both remarkably malleable and contradictory in content. From a religious standpoint, it has been propagated by Paganism, Christianity, Islam, and Atheism. Politically, it has been adopted by both right and left-wing parties and ideologues, by nationalists and internationalists, and by imperialists and anti-colonialists. In addition, it has appealed to elements among peasants, aristocrats, the bourgeoisie, and the intelligentsia. As a result, the ranks of the anti-Semites have far exceeded those of Philo-Semites. Obviously, the cost-benefit calculations involved favor perpetrators espousing antisemitism. Why is this? Are there unique characteristics of the Jewish people that have made them particularly vulnerable targets and attractive scapegoats for societies’ problems and grievances?

2:40-3:00 P.M.

Benjamin Weinthal,
European Affairs Correspondent,
Jerusalem Post;
Research Fellow,

“Making Sense of Guilt-Defensiveness Antisemitism in Europe”
The talk will cover the rise of antisemitism in Europe in response to the Holocaust. The German philosophers Theodor W. Adorno and Max Horkheimer termed this new form of antisemitism "guilt-defensiveness antisemitism."
While Adorno and Horkheimer largely limited their theory to guilt-defensiveness antisemitism in Germany after the Shoah, my talk will explore guilt-defensiveness antisemitism with respect to Israel in Germany, Austria and Western Europe.

“The Myth of Judas as the Origin of Modern Antisemitism”
This presentation will aim to demonstrate that the very antisemitism that holds Jews responsible for the woes of the world was born in the Middle Ages. Furthermore, the myth of Judas as the prefiguration of modern antisemitism is explored. Antisemitism, which hates the "Jew", should not be confused with anti-Judaism which rejects "Judaism".

Readings (Kotek):

4:20-4:40 P.M.  Professor David Patterson,

University of Texas at Dallas,

“Antisemitism from Hitler to Hamas”
This presentation explores the genealogical development of antisemitism from the Holocaust through the post-Holocaust spread of the Muslim Brotherhood and up to the Brotherhood’s offshoot: Hamas. The presentation pays particular attention to the Islamist Mufti of Jerusalem Haj Amin al-Husseini, as a critical go-between for the Nazis and the Muslim Brotherhood. Al-Husseini had his first meeting with Hitler in November 1941 and organized Muslim SS killing units in the Balkans. In July 1946, now a Nazi war criminal, the Brotherhood gave him a hero’s welcome when he turned up in Cairo.

Next, the presentation goes into al-Husseini’s recruitment and indoctrination of Yasser Arafat and the Brotherhood’s most influential ideologue Sayyid Qutb and his Nazi-inspired promotion of exterminationist Jew-hatred. Finally, it will be shown how his influence extended throughout the Jihadist world to such organizations as the PLO, the Islamic Republic of Iran, Al-Qaeda, Hezbollah, and Hamas. Although these Islamic Jihadists either deny the Holocaust or claim that the Jews were behind it, their ultimate, stated aim is to continue the work of the Nazis and bring about a Final Solution to the Jewish Question.

“Combating Antisemitism in the Muslim World”
This lecture addresses the roots of antisemitism in the Arab world, focusing on the nature, persistence, and scale of antisemitism in the Arab world. It argues that Muslims should be joining forces with others to fight antisemitism and Islamophobia - two faces of the same coin. It concludes by outlining a strategy for combating racism and antisemitism in the Arab world.

“A Fresh Look at the 1948 War, the First Arab-Israeli War”
This presentation will cover the war’s military/political development, the nature of war (political versus religious/cultural), the war aims of the participants, the refugee problems created by the war, and the balance of forces in the war’s two parts.

Readings (Morris):

6:50-7:10 P.M.  Dr. Ramy Aziz,
Research Scholar, ISGAP

“The Link Between the Palestinian Cause and the Spread of Antisemitism”
The term of the Palestinian cause is considered one of the most dangerous terms that have been using, for many decades, to promote the antisemitism and hatred against Jews across the world. All the Jihadist and political Islam groups, in all types have been using the Palestinian cause, as a pretext to promote antisemitism and hatred of Jews, and call for the killing them, starting with the Muslim Brotherhood in 1928, the Izz al-Din al-Qassam movement in 1935, Mufti Hajj Amin al-Husseini, who cooperated with Hitler for this, the Islamic Republic of Iran, Hezbollah, Al-Qaeda, down to ISIS.
Here we will review the relationship between the promotion of the Palestinian cause and the spread of antisemitism, and the most important incidents of antisemitism that came out of that, through the different historical stages, right up to the present day.

“Israel and the Middle East 2021: Pandemic and Geopolitics”
The lecture will discuss the junction in history where pandemics and antisemitism(s) encounter each other. History has taught us that pandemics have always revived the hostility towards "the other," and antisemitism has risen accordingly (e.g., during the Spanish Flu). We will examine the extent to which COVID-19 has influenced levels of antisemitism in various Middle Eastern states and will pay particular attention to the atmosphere in Iran and the Palestinian Authority and their reactions to Israel during these times. Finally, the lecture will draw a panoramic view of the Middle East in 2020 – considering that beyond the virus, we are dealing with the "routine" sorrows of the region.

“Antisemitism and the Gaza Conflict in May 2021: What Was New and What Was Old?”
May 2021 saw a surge in antisemitism in the United Kingdom, fueled by reactions to the conflict in Israel and Gaza. In many ways, this followed a predictable path whereby conflicts involving Israel trigger spikes in antisemitism overseas. However, this antisemitic reaction took place in a new landscape, shaped by the ever-increasing prevalence of social media and the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. This lecture will look at different trends and features of this particular wave of antisemitism and draw out what was familiar, what was new, and what it tells us about how antisemitism operates today.

2:30-3:00 P.M.  Dr. David Hirsh,
Senior Lecturer in Sociology,
Goldsmiths, University of London,
London, United Kingdom

Dr. Hirsh will detail the key points of his book, Contemporary Left Antisemitism, looking at the kind of antisemitism which is tolerated, or which goes unacknowledged in apparently democratic spaces: trade unions, churches, left-wing and liberal politics, social gatherings of the chattering classes, and the seminars and journals of radical intellectuals.

“The Lure of Fascism”
Commentator Emily Lorimer, writing in 1938, warned that Hitler’s initial program was composed of three elements: the desire to create a ‘truly German’ state, attack social democracy, and secure the rights of workers. This presentation will take up Lorimer’s themes to consider developments in contemporary democracies, exploring especially how authoritarian leaders are again playing up ideas of national identity and undermining the institutions that hold democracy together. There will also be a consideration of the dangers in attempting to graft crude nationalist ideas onto the workers’ movement.

“The War Against Hate: American Jewish Resistance to Antisemitism and White Supremacy After 1945”

Americans today like to believe that the end of World War II brought a decrease in hate and ushered in a new era of tolerance in the United States. Nothing could be further from the truth. Antisemitism and racism went up—not down—following the end of the war. The War Against Hate: American Resistance to White Supremacy After 1945 reveals the chilling story of the decades-long battle between four postwar hate leaders and the three groups that fought to stop them. Americans emerged from World War II with two starkly different visions of the nation’s future; two visions fought by groups equally committed to their understanding of what it meant to be a true American. On one side stood Emory Burke, J. B. Stoner, James Madole, George Lincoln Rockwell, and their followers who saw themselves as true patriots protecting the white Christian world they knew before the war against all who would now degrade and destroy it. On the other side stood those who fought to preserve what they saw as the main lesson of WWII: that a united, multi-ethnic, multi-racial, multi-religious nation could defeat the forces of Nazism and oppression and forge a nation that “honors and upholds human rights and equality.”

Starting in 1946, Burke, Stoner, and Madole led a “war of hate” that promised to “finish the job Hitler had begun,” building violent networks of terror and planning deadly attacks on Jews and Blacks. They were opposed by three New York-based spymasters—Robert Forster of the Anti-Defamation League, George Mintzer of the American Jewish Committee, and James Sheldon of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League—and the dozens of undercover operatives who monitored and undermined the deadly efforts of various hate groups. This lecture will describe the rise and fall of various hate groups and how the continuing legacy of postwar hate culminated in the Capitol Insurrection of January 6, 2021.

Forty-two years after the Islamic Revolution, while attracting the attention of scholars, politicians, and the media, Iran is still an enigma. “How Media Targeting Spanish-Speakers is Fueling Antisemitism”

Today, content is king, and digital news brands like Al Jazeera’s AJ+, Russia’s RT, and Iran’s HispanTV, are investing millions of dollars into producing high quality, visually appealing traditional and social media content in Spanish to win the hearts and minds of young Latino in the US and Latin America. As recent events have shown, negative news stories have resulted in physical violence against Jews, as well as online attacks for expressions of Jewish identity. The shift away from traditional media, accelerated by the COVID-19 pandemic, the rise of social justice movements, and the weaponization of identity politics, has given very large and influential new media outlets free range to spread disinformation about Israel and Jews.

Some of the most effective antisemitic mobilizations defy conventional categorizations (e.g., left/right/jihadist) and instead transpire within and across the intersections of gender, sexual politics, and “social justice.” This presentation considers how a continued reliance on antiquated frameworks obscures our ability to rigorously depict, track, and counteract contemporary antisemitism’s widespread appeal.

“The United Nations Human Rights Machinery Attempts to Combat Antisemitism”

In 2019, the United Nations Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Religion or Belief, Dr. Ahmed Shaheed, presented to the UN General Assembly the first-ever UN report on antisemitism as a human rights abuse. That report drew upon significant research conducted with Jews and Jewish community groups across the world, desk research on antisemitism as a human rights abuse, and concerted efforts by the special rapporteur to demonstrate the myriad of different ways in which governments are in violation of their obligations regarding freedom of religion or belief. The backdrop against which this report was written is a tense relationship between many Jews and the UN human rights machinery, largely based on the overlap in some bodies between legitimate criticism of Israel and antisemitism. As such, this was a groundbreaking report both in terms of understanding antisemitism as a human rights abuse and in taking a step towards repairing relationships between Jewish civil society and the UN human rights bodies. This talk will provide a brief background on the UN human rights machinery, before turning to the report and explaining how it was conducted and its findings in-depth.

“Antizionism, Antisemitism and the May 2021 Combustion”

The Israel-Gaza conflict in May sparked a wave of antisemitic attacks against Jews worldwide, making clear the link between antipathy to Israel and Jew-hatred. Antisemitic antizionism is decades old, though never as widespread and mainstream as it is today. A glance at the past may provide insight as to what lies ahead, and how to thread the argument about why antizionism is not just about being against a nationalist political movement or racism.

“A Domestic and International Action Plan for Combatting Antisemitism”
This lecture will be organized around three parts; first, a snapshot of the escalating, global, virulent, sophisticated, and lethal antisemitism that has found expression in two dramatic developments: hate crimes and social media, second will deal with several of the dynamics that are underpinning the old/new antisemitism including the mainstreaming, normalizing and legitimation of antisemitism in the political culture and third will share a 10 point action plan to combat antisemitism.

“Common Bonds and Experiences of African and Jewish Communities”
The familiar journey of Africa and Israel is one of close kinship, shared history, common adversities, and resemblant triumphs. Both Africa and Israel have historically experienced enslavement, colonization, exile, and systematic oppression – most prominently at the hands of European societies. This subjugation of African and Jewish communities has been notably precipitated by the dismantling of sovereignty within their homelands and rooted in a consistent psychology of oppression. In the face of these difficult trials and sojourns, both groups drew upon mutual inspiration as they resolutely marched toward re-established sovereignty. The collaboration between Africans and Jews, and their common lessons of resilience and ingenuity in the face of dire obstacles, holds the promise of catapulting both peoples - distinctively and collectively - to unprecedented heights of self-realization and contribution to human progress.

“A Qualitative Analysis of the Black and Jewish Experience: How Hip-Hop and Whiteness Influences Racial Functionalism”
The presentation will explore a qualitative research interview analysis, investigating how Jewish Americans’ and African Americans’ racial experiences intersect and how media influences such as Hip-Hop and whiteness conflate and divide the ethnicities. Despite the interpreted view of Jewish people being a liberated group, contemporary antisemitism remains strong. Communities around the world continue to cosign Jews to tropes and archetypes, especially regarding the control of specific industries and economic structural arrangements. Unfortunately, quite a few prominent African American community members assert that Jews are white people who help protect and maintain an oppressive order and work to marginalize ethnicities such as African Americans.

Dedicated to the Life and Memory of Dr. William H. Prusoff

Dr. William H. Prusoff, played an instrumental role in the founding of the Institute for the Study of Global Antisemitism and Policy (ISGAP). Growing up in Brooklyn he witnessed local brown shirt Nazi sympathizers repeatedly burn down his family-owned shop. His family fled to Miami Beach where Professor Prusoff steeled and enrolled at the University of Miami. He was not able to attend higher-ranked universities due to quotas on Jewish students and faculty that was prevalent in the United States at the time. It was this experience that made him most sensitive and concerned about the reemergence of current manifestations of Jew-hatred. Despite this experience with antisemitism, Dr. Prusoff managed to become a leading pharmacologist at the Yale School of Medicine who, with a colleague, developed an effective component in the first generation of drug cocktails used to treat AIDS. Dr. Prusoff spent most of his long career studying molecular derivatives of thymidine, a building block of DNA. His work led him to develop two important antiviral drugs.

In the early 1950s, he synthesized idoxuridine, a successful treatment for infant keratitis. The condition, an inflammation of the cornea caused by the herpes simplex virus, was the leading infectious cause of blindness. Idoxuridine disrupted the virus’s ability to reproduce. This was an important breakthrough. At the time, it was believed that antiviral agents powerful enough to be effective would be too toxic for human use and that those safe for use would be too weak to counteract a virus.

In the mid-1980s, as the AIDS epidemic spread, Dr. Prusoff and a Yale colleague, Tai-shun Lin, began looking at thymidine derivatives that had been developed to treat cancer but discarded when they proved ineffective. One of these was stavudine, also known as d4T, a molecular cousin of the first AIDS drug, AZT. Both had been synthesized in the 1960s by Dr. Jerome P. Horwitz at the Michigan Cancer Foundation, now the Karmanos Cancer Institute, in Detroit.

Dr. Prusoff and Dr. Lin resynthesized the molecule and found in laboratory tests that it short-circuited the viral enzyme in H.I.V., causing it to produce short, incomplete pieces of DNA rather than complete strands.

Yale took out a patent in the doctors’ names and licensed it to Bristol-Myers Squibb for development. In 1992, it became the first drug to be tested under the F.D.A.’s parallel-track policy, which allowed patients with life-threatening illnesses to obtain drugs undergoing clinical trials. Because of its potential side effects, notably numbness, burning sensations and loss of fat in the feet, legs or hands, the drug is now used primarily in poor countries, where it is cheap and widely available.

Stavudine earned tens of millions of dollars for Yale each year — more than the total amount for all its other licensed medicines combined. It also made millions for Dr. Prusoff, who became a vocal supporter of a campaign initiated by Doctors Without Borders to persuade Bristol-Meyers to lower the drug’s price in sub-Saharan Africa, where AIDS was rampant.

Dr. Lawrence Amsel
Lamsel01@gmail.com

Dr. Lawrence Amsel is an academic psychiatrist on the faculty of Columbia University. His areas of focus is in understanding the long term effects of psychological trauma, the applications of Behavioral Economics and Game Theory to psychiatry, and interface of Psychiatry and the Law. He recently co-edited a book entitled: An International Perspective on Disasters and Children's Mental Health, to be published in Summer 2019 by Springer. He is also working on a book On Mathematical Models in Psychiatry for Oxford University Press. He is a child of Holocaust survivors, which has been a key influence in every corner of his life, from becoming a healer focused on trauma, to his political and philosophical commitments. As a child and young man, he received a classic, old-world Yeshiva education (largely in Yiddish) with its emphasis on Talmud and ethical behavior. Later he was active in the Soviet Jewry movement and student support for Israel. These experiences of political activism have remained important throughout his life. The pleasures of rigorous thinking that he first encountered in studying Talmud later led to a major in Mathematics at Columbia College. But once in mathematics grad school he concluded that he needed to be more involved in addressing the emotional aspects of people’s lives. He switched directions and attended Yale University School of Medicine followed by a Psychiatry Residency. Subsequently, he completed a Master’s in Public Health, and joined the faculty of the Columbia University medical school. For a number of years following 9/11, he co-directed the Columbia clinic specifically funded to focus on victims of that terrorist attack. In this capacity he encountered a large number of police officers, firefighters, and other First Responders, as well as financial professionals. Dr. Amsel is also an ISGAP Research Fellow.

Professor Pedro Jose Gonzalez Corona
pedro.gonzalez@utdallas.edu

Professor Pedro Gonzalez recently earned his PhD in the History of Ideas program at the University of Texas at Dallas (UTD), and works as a research assistant for the Center for U.S.-Latin America Initiatives. In his native country of Mexico, Professor Gonzalez worked in the Federal Government as an intern at the Presidency of the Republic and agent at the Attorney General’s Office. Those experiences awakened his passion for human rights. After establishing his residency in Texas, and working for several years in business development, he resumed his academic career at Southern Methodist University (SMU), where he earned a master’s degree in human rights with a focus on two main components: the Holocaust and genocide, and Latin American state sponsored violence. He is working on his Certification of Holocaust Studies at UTD’s Ackerman Center for Holocaust Studies, where he also collaborates as the liaison-academic advisor who established contact and agreements with museums and academic institutions in Mexico City, Guatemala City, Paris, and the Meritorious University of Puebla, Mexico (BUAP). Mr. Gonzalez has a long record of participation in human rights. He recently completed his dissertation on racism and nation-state building in the nineteenth century. He is also an ISGAP Research Fellow who convened the Antisemitism in Latin America in Comparative Perspective Seminar Series.

Dr. David Hirsh
hirshd@gmail.com

David Hirsh has been in the Sociology Department at Goldsmiths College since 2003. He studied Sociology as an undergraduate at City University, London. He did an MA in Philosophy and Social Theory at Warwick University and wrote his PhD there on crimes against humanity and international law. He was the holder of the Sociological Review Fellowship in 2001-2002, which enabled him to write Law Against Genocide: Cosmopolitan Trials. This book was awarded the British Sociological Association Philip Abrams Prize for the best first book in sociology in 2004. By focusing on two trials from the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (the trial of Andrei Sawoniuk for crimes committed during the Holocaust, and the David Irving libel case), the book comes to tentative conclusions about the possibility of the emergence of cosmopolitan law. Professor Hirsh received a Rothschild/Hanadiv Foundation research grant of £25000 for a project “to investigate the character and dynamics of anti-Zionism as a contemporary political movement and its relationship to antisemitism”. The central research output was a major Working Paper published by the Yale Initiative for the Interdisciplinary Study of Antisemitism, titled “Anti-Zionism and Antisemitism: Cosmopolitan Reflections.” His most recent book is Contemporary Left Antisemitism, published in 2017.

He is the founding chair of the Geneva-based human rights think-tank, the Universal Rights Group, and Senior Fellow at Raoul Wallenberg Human Rights Centre in Montreal.
Natan Sharansky

Natan Sharansky became the Chair of ISGAP in the fall of 2019. Mr. Sharansky was born in 1948 in Donetsk, Ukraine. He was a spokesman for the human rights movement, a prisoner of conscience and leader in the struggle for the right of Soviet Jews to immigrate to Israel. Mr. Sharansky was a founding member of the Helsinki Group, which monitored violations of international agreements of different religious and national groups in the Soviet Union. He worked closely with Andrei Sakharov, the renowned Soviet human rights activist, and kept close contact with foreign media beyond the iron curtain. In 1977, a Soviet newspaper alleged that Mr. Sharansky was collaborating with the CIA. Despite denials from every level of the U.S. government, Mr. Sharansky was found guilty and sentenced to thirteen years in prison, including solitary confinement and hard labor. In the courtroom prior to the announcement of the verdict, Mr. Sharansky in a public statement said, “To the court I have nothing to say – to my wife and the Jewish people I say, ‘Next Year in Jerusalem.’”

After nine years of imprisonment, due to an intense international campaign led by his wife, Avital, Mr. Sharansky was released on February 11, 1986, immigrated to Israel, and moved to Jerusalem that same day. In Israel, he became active in the integration of Soviet Jews and formed the Zionist Forum, an umbrella organization of former Soviet activist groups dedicated to helping new Israelis and educating the public about absorption issues. The final chapter of the historic struggle for the release of Soviet Jews was the historic rally of over 250,000 people in Washington in 1987, of which Natan Sharansky was the initiator and driving force, during Mikhail Gorbachev’s first visit to the US capital. In 1996, he established the Yisrael B’Aliyah party in order to accelerate the integration of new immigrants into Israeli society. He served in four successive Israeli governments as a Minister and Deputy Prime Minister.

In 2009, Sharansky was appointed Chairman of the Executive of the Jewish Agency for Israel. The mission of the Jewish Agency is to guarantee the future of the Jewish People by strengthening the connection of every Jew to the State of Israel and to the Jewish People. In 2018, he received the highest Israeli award - the Israel Prize, for promoting Aliyah and the ingathering of the exiles. Mr. Sharansky is the recipient of the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Presidential Medal of Freedom. He is the only living non-American citizen who is the recipient of these two highest American awards. In 2020, Mr. Sharansky was the recipient of the 2020 Genesis Prize. He is also the author of three books: Fear No Evil, The Case for Democracy, and Defending Identity. He remains a champion of the right of all people to live in freedom and believes that the advancement of human rights is critical to peace and security around the world.

Dr. Dana Barnett researches anti-Israel activities by academics, antisemitism in academia, delegitimization of Israel, and other academic and Israel-related issues. Barnett co-edited the upcoming book “Soft Threats to National Security: Antisemitism, BDS and the De-legitimization of Israel” (Routledge, 2022), exploring the inextricable linkage between the BDS phenomenon, its anti-Israel/anti-Zionist propaganda, and antisemitism: The old Russian anti-Zionist propaganda and its application by BDS. Her research also focuses on Palestinian focus on fabricated history, Western universities turned into incubators of pro-Palestinian groups, how the academic boycott of Israel works to isolate and stigmatize Jewish scholars in America, how when Western “liberals” build bridges with Islam - unable to overcome differences - they focus on what they agree: animosity towards Israel, and lastly, how the covert part of BDS harbours antisemitic and violent supporters, including terror groups and Iran.
Barnett completed her PhD at King’s College London in 2015. Her thesis, Post Zionism and Israeli Universities: The Academic Political Nexus (LAP LAMBERT Academic Publishing: 2016), is a systematic account of post-Zionism in the Israeli academy. Barnett is also the co-founder of Israel Academia Monitor, since 2004, documenting the writing of anti-Israel Israeli academics who abuse the academic cathedra for political gain.

Matthias Becker is a postdoc researcher at the Center for Research on Antisemitism (ZfA) at the Technical University in Berlin. Furthermore, he is also affiliated to CENTRIC, Sheffield Hallam University and to the Vidal Sassoon Center at Hebrew University, Jerusalem. His research lies within the disciplines of (cognitive and pragma) linguistics, critical discourse analysis, research on prejudice and nationalism, as well as internet studies. In his studies, he focuses on the construction of implicit hate speech. His doctoral dissertation, published with Nomos in 2018, analyses the linguistic construction of antisemitic stereotypes and demonising historical analogies in British and German discourses on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. An English version of the book (with the title “Antisemitism in Reader Comments: Analogies for Reckoning with the Past”) was published with Palgrave Macmillan in 2021. In his postdoc project, he examines various forms of antisemitic and racist hate speech on British news websites in the context of Brexit. Since 2020, Dr. Becker leads the international research project “Decoding Antisemitism,” funded by the Alfred Landecker Foundation. In this 3-year pilot project, researchers analyse antisemitism on mainstream news websites and social media platforms in Germany, France, and in the UK based on a mixed methods approach, also integrating AI technology.

Yitzhak Mor
yitzhak.mor@mail.huji.ac.il

Yitzhak is a Ph.D. Candidate in the Department of Jewish History and Contemporary Jewry at The Hebrew University of Jerusalem. His research examines the relationship between Jews and Christians in the United States in recent decades and the spectrum of Christian beliefs ranging from philo-Semitism to antisemitism underlying this relationship. His MA thesis examines relations between Neo-Conservative Catholic and Jewish thinkers in contemporary America. His broader research interests include political theology, Jewish-Christian interfaith dialogue, American religious and political conservatism, Christian Zionism, Holocaust consciousness and antisemitism in America. Yitzhak is the recipient of Sir Sigmund and Lady Hazel Sternberg Prizes for Interfaith Understanding, the Annenberg Prize for American Studies and a scholarship for the study of antisemitism, racism, the Holocaust, genocide and mass violence from the Institute of Contemporary Jewry at the Hebrew University. During his MA, he was a Fellow at the Center for the Study of Christianity at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He was recently awarded a doctoral scholarship from the Vidal Sassoon International Center for the Study of Antisemitism.

Yitzhak has a BA from the integrated Philosophy, Political Science and Economics (PPE) program at the Hebrew University. He also served as a content writer for the President of the State of Israel.
Dr. James Nemiroff
James.Nemiroff@kzoo.edu

James Nemiroff is currently a Visiting Assistant Professor of Spanish at Kalamazoo College. He earned his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago in Romance Languages and Literatures, as well as Masters degrees from the University of Chicago and the Spanish National Research Council in Madrid Spain. His scholarship analyzes the representation of Judaism in 16th and 17th Century Spanish literature. More specifically, his research investigates to what degree Jewish religious identities are categories of performance that helped not only shape Early Modern Spanish drama but also shaped historiographical debates about the relationships between Jews and Christians that persist today. Based on his dissertation, which explores to what degree characters Judaize or perform Judaism on stage in certain Spanish dramas, he is working on a book entitled, Lope’s Forgeries: Lope’s Toledan Comedias as Early Modern Fake News. He has also published essays in such journals as E-humanista and in collections edited through Iberoamericana and the University of Chicago Press. As a teacher-scholar, Dr. Nemiroff incorporates educational technologies to teach his research interests to undergraduate students. For example, in a course exploring how certain Anti-Judaic and Islamophobic tropes date back to Early Modern Spain, which he will be refining at the Institute, students created augmented reality posters that taught them to recognize and productively fight against the antisemitism and islamophobia they encounter each day on their social media feeds.

Max Storey
M.C.Storey@2018.ljmu.ac.uk
Max Storey recently completed his undergraduate degree in History at Liverpool John Moores University and is currently slated to start an MA in History at the University of Manchester. At the undergraduate level, Max’s academic focus was turned towards the study of antisemitism, with his dissertation being centred on the inextricable link between the medieval blood libel, and the current rise in coronavirus antisemitism. He believes this to be a much-needed field of research that at present, requires dedicated academic attention in order to fully crystallise antisemitism in the age of coronavirus. He wishes to take this study to PhD and beyond, and hopes the conversations and ideas discussed at this year’s ISGAP Summer Institute to be an incredible launch pad for his academic career.
Ruben Zeeman
rubenzeeman96@hotmail.com

Ruben Zeeman has obtained a pre-MA degree in Modern European Philosophy from the University of Leiden, and a BA in History from the University of Groningen, the Netherlands. His research focuses on the relation between historiography, (collective) memory and ethics, through the lens of modern and contemporary Central and Eastern European history. He is inspired by the works of Martin Buber and, in particular, Emmanuel Levinas, to find ways to rearrange how we write history, and understand and relate to the past, as to increase awareness of our shared humanity and our shared living on this planet (thus extending the scope of history to all life on earth). An important example of such an approach is the work of Svetlana Alexievich. In addition to his academic research, he is the co-editor of the Network of Concerned Historians (NCH). Set-up by Professor Antoon de Baets in 1995, NCH provides a bridge between human rights organizations and the global community of historians. His hope is that through a better understanding of our past wrongs, we can learn from and help each other in the present and towards the future. The study of antisemitism in particular has been at the center of his research so far. During this summer program, he hopes to learn more about different approaches to the study of antisemitism, different case studies from around the world, and, most importantly, he hopes to learn more about ways to combat antisemitism and narratives of exclusion. In times like this, the importance of international and interdisciplinary research cannot be overexaggerated.
